To Whom It May Concern,

Re: Letter of Recommendation for Ofir Anidjar

I am writing to recommend Ofir Anidjar without reservation. Ofir and I have worked together across three different engagements spanning more than ten years, and I can speak to his professional character with a level of confidence that comes only from sustained, repeated collaboration.

I first hired Ofir in 2014 as a Leasing Agent at NR Investments in Orlando, Florida, where he managed leasing operations across three multi-unit apartment complexes. After he moved on to build his own hospitality business (Ukiyo B&B in Fort Lauderdale and Hollywood, FL, where he operated five hostel-style properties), I brought him back to consult on a short-term rental project for a property of mine in Tampa. Most recently, when Arba Living LLC needed a remote Multi-Property Leasing Specialist in September 2024, Ofir was the first person I called. He worked with us through May 2026, supporting our leasing and property operations across a portfolio of over 1,100 apartment units across multiple U.S. markets. His role ended due to a restructuring of our service arrangement, not for any reason related to his performance.

The reason I have kept returning to Ofir over the years comes down to a combination of qualities that are surprisingly hard to find in any single person. He is reliable in the deepest sense of the word. He does what he says he will do, by when he said he would do it, without needing to be managed. He communicates clearly and proactively in writing, which makes him exceptional for remote work. He understands the business behind the tasks, not just the tasks themselves. When he identifies a process gap, he flags it with a proposed solution rather than waiting for direction.

What sets Ofir apart is his operator mindset. He has run his own businesses, taken his own risks, and learned the real cost of getting operations wrong. He brings that perspective to every role. He treats the properties he supports as if they were his own. That is a rare quality in any leasing or property operations professional, and it is the single biggest reason I have hired him three times.

His professional strengths include leasing operations, tenant communications, fair housing compliance, multi-property coordination, CRM and property management software proficiency (including Yardi Voyager and Knock CRM), SOP development, and the cross-cultural communication skills that come from working across multiple regions and time zones. He is fluent in English and Hebrew, comfortable in U.S. business contexts, and brings hospitality-grade attention to resident and guest experience, which is a quality conventional leasing roles rarely produce on their own.

For any organization or client considering Ofir for property management, leasing operations, short-term rental consulting, or virtual operations work, I offer my strongest endorsement. He is a dependable, intelligent, and resourceful professional. The fact that I have hired him three times over the course of a decade should tell you everything you need to know about the quality of his work and the trust he earns from the people he works for.

Please feel free to contact me directly should you require any additional information.

Sincerely,
